

Dear Colleagues,

All around the world, we face tremendous changes and challenges in medical education. Substantial challenges come from the society's expectation in addition to the internal driven challenges towards an ideal future doctor. The ideal picture of these future physicians embraces certain behavioral characteristics which are discipline, empathy, a sense of commitment to their profession and also compassion. One matter that should be taken into consideration is that even though clinical education has the biggest influence in the educational phases, it is also proven to be the most neglected one.

There have been many innovations and on-going process of innovations in clinical education all over Asian Region. In terms of academic building blocks, they involve several aspects like curriculum, teaching-learning methods, human resources development program, available teaching materials, information and communication technology application etc. Even though these innovations are very diverse in nature, the ultimate goal is to create an ideal future doctor. Therefore, this plethora of innovations will in turn make an excellent mosaic, the mosaic of Asia. In accordance with this matter, the theme of this coming conference will be "Education for Future Physician: Mosaic in Asia".

On behalf of everyone here in the Faculty of Medicine Universitas Padjadjaran, I would like to cordially invite you to join the 5th AMEA conference here in Bandung, Indonesia on the fourth to seventh October 2009. Indonesia is very famous for our beautiful scenery and the hospitality of its residents, while Bandung in particular was very well known as the host of Asia Africa Conference back in 1955, it is also known as the Parijs van Java for its factory outlet stores, culinary and arts for the shoppers-at-heart.

I look forward to seeing you in person here in Bandung in 2009.

Sincerely,

Eri Surahman

Dean,

Faculty of Medicine, Universitas Padjadjaran
